

Canadian Driver's Licence Reference Guide

In Canada, provincial/territorial licencing regulations are modeled on the guidelines set out in the Canadian Council of Motor Transport Administrators (CCMTA) National Safety Code (NSC) that is supported by four standards. All Canadian licenced drivers must meet these requirements prior to being eligible to operate a commercial vehicle and are required to carry a driver's licence that is valid for the vehicle and conditions under which it is operated.

This guide will identify each of the 13 Canadian jurisdictions (10 provinces and three territories) and their driver licencing classification system. The content includes the driver licence class, type of vehicle permitted to be operated and restriction/endorsement codes.

DISCLAIMER/CAUTION

The "Canadian Driver's Licence Reference Guide" is designed to be used as guidelines only. While the guidelines represent good practices, they may not conform exactly to current provincial/territorial regulations. Inspectors are cautioned to always follow current regulations when determining what licence information is required.

Nova Scotia Driver's Licence

RESTRICTIONS

Most restriction codes are printed on the back of the driver's licence. Some codes (i.e., area restrictions) may be too lengthy to print on the back of the card. Those codes will cause a large red "R" to be printed on the front of the licence to alert law enforcement's attention to the restriction. In order to know what these particular codes mean, law enforcement must contact the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

Many restriction codes will also cause a large red "R" to be printed on the front of the driver's licence even where the code itself prints fully on the back of the licence. Again, it is expected that this will draw law enforcement's attention to the particular restriction.

The Nova Scotia driver's licence does not print a "Y" or "N" on the front of the licence to indicate whether the particular driver has any restrictions.

Restrictions Due to Age: None
